1. How does laser engraving work on wood?

During laser engraving, the laser beam removes the top layer of wood, creating a permanent and precise mark. The depth of the engraving can be controlled, allowing for various design options.

2. Can laser engraving be done on all types of wood?

While laser engraving can be done on most types of wood, some woods produce better results due to their density and hardness. Hardwoods like maple, cherry, and walnut are popular choices for laser engraving.

3. Is laser engraving safe for food-related items?

When using food-related items, it's important to choose non-toxic finishes and ensure proper cleaning. Laser engraving itself is safe as it produces a permanent and sealed mark on the wood surface.
