Why is it not recommended to buy a second-hand laser cutting machine? First of all, the definition of a second-hand laser cutting machine is a second-hand laser equipment that is monopolized due to some special circumstances after the use of the former. Although it has undertaken all the functions of this equipment, it is also a lot of hidden dangers and troubles, which is why there are so many. People still choose the brand new laser cutting machine. Let's do some analysis on second-hand laser cutting machines:

1. We may not be sure that the second-hand laser cutting machine must be a rebranded brand before. Generally, manufacturers will have sales records, which is fatal to after-sales service. Even if there is a problem, the manufacturer will not help repair it. At the same time, there are also problems with the use of functions, because the original seller may not be in touch after selling the machine, and the equipment needs to be explored by yourself more often, and whether it can be used may still be unknown.
2. In the use of second-hand laser cutting machines, it is not fully understood the workflow of early users, nor can it fully understand the working conditions of the equipment, and many hidden internal equipment elements can also be formed, which is the risk of second-hand laser cutting machines
Thorough results.
3. The price difference between a new laser cutting machine and a second-hand laser cutting machine is not obvious, if you can. Plan to buy a second-hand laser cutting machine, why not add a little price to buy a new one? And the new laser cutting machine has good guarantee, perfect after-sales team, why not?
